The Honduran Coup is the latest of a long list of Coups staged in Latin America. What is behind the ousting of the constitutionally elected President, Manuel Zelaya, responsible for bringing Honduras under ALBA (Bolivarian Alliance for Latin America and the Caribbean)? What lessons can be drawn from past Coups to overcome this new assault on democracy? This panel invites you to debate these and other important related topics.

This public lecture is free and open to the public. It is not required to register. For further information, please contact massicot@uottawa.ca Parking is available on campus.
